Bulletin Board

Thank You, Thank You! for making the July All-Class "Free Lunch" Ride to Kingsland Point a success. A record 146 members came on one of the most beautiful days of the year. Many thanks to Gene Vezzani’s group of riders who "hosted" the event, and to Joel Engleman for organizing it.

Don’t Blame DOUGLAS for any errors, inaccuracies, or just plain foul-ups on this month’s Bulletin. Our editor was singing in Italy while this month’s bulletin was being put together. Hope Vivaldi’s church was worth it, Doug!

Coming Soon to a Mailbox Near You
The “Escape from New York Century” is coming up next month, on September 21, and we’re all going to be there. Look for the registration form in your mailbox soon. Three great rides, three distances: century, metric century, half century. The century committee needs your help on the day of the event, with marshalling, manning rest stops, check-in, even clean-up. Help make this year’s event as great — or greater — than last year’s. Call Mitch Yarvin at (212) 988-8887 to volunteer.

A Second Chance to Order a NYCC Jacket and Jersey
By now you know how great the 1996 NYCC jerseys and jackets look, feel, and fit. If you missed out on the first order, or hesitated to add the great-looking jacket to your order (don’t forget, Fall is just around the corner), or just love your new NYCC jersey so much you want another, now’s your second, and last, chance to order. Use the order form in this Bulletin to order by the August 13 deadline, or order at the August club meeting. Your colorful new 1996 club jerseys and jackets should be ready in time for the NYCC “Escape from New York Century”.

Columbus Day on Shelter Island! This year, our Columbus Day weekend will be at the lovely Victorian inn, the Chequit, on Shelter Island in Peconic Bay. Eastern Long Island is beautiful in the fall, when the summer residents are gone and roads are untrafficked. We’ve got a great selection of rides planned for this great weekend. But . . . you must act now! Space is limited, and filling up fast. See Ride Previews for information.

Just in time for the All-Class Picnic. Here’s the deal: we’ll leave The Boathouse for an easy ride to the start in Yonkers. They do a leisurely 10 mile warm-up to White Plains and then it’s race pace for 32 miles through Armonk, Chappaqua, Mt. Kisco, back through Armonk and Purchase before sprinting into Mamaroneck. Come join us for our return to this wonderful island and the romantic Victorian Inn, the Chequit, with its porch overlooking the bay. We will have dinner all together in the Chequit dining room one evening at a reasonable fixed price. There will be multiple options for getting out there and back, including bus and train. Also, there will be a ride out on Friday for those of us who can take the day off. This ride is limited to 40 people, so make your plans quickly! The cost is $205 per person. Make your check out to Christy Guzzetta and send it to 49 West 75th Street, New York, NY 10023. QUESTIONS: Call Jody Sayler (212) 799-8293.

For Centuries, Double Cs or IronMan Distances, Carbos Still Stoke

By Julie Walsh, MS, RD

If you're planning to ride a century, double-century or further, you may need to retool your diet. If you're forking down junk-food, eating more protein than carbohydrates, or save your carbo-loading for the night before your ego-challenge, don't blame your body if fails you en route. Just as you should be training your muscles to handle the demands of cycling long distances, you also need to eat appropriately to help your body burn fuels efficiently, and speed recovery post-exercise. For optimal performance, this means eating right months, weeks and days before pedaling major distances.

For most cyclists, and especially those putting in mega-miles for endurance events, the biggest issue is their carbohydrate intake. Despite the recent hoopla over high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets (ie, The Zone), there is scant evidence that these diets work. Most sports nutritionists, exercise physiologists and elite riders are still carbohydrate committed. Here's why carbs stoke.

During exercise, muscles obtain energy from the carbohydrate stored in the muscles, liver, and bloodstream. At low-intensities, fat is primarily burned for fuel but at higher intensities, over 70% VO2max carbohydrates supply the bulk of energy. But unless you're riding at a snail's pace, you're burning some carbs, too, says Craig Horswill, Ph.D., an exercise physiologist and research scientist. Carbo's downside is that the body can only store about 1,400-1,800 calories worth of energy in the liver and muscles, whereas the body has almost unlimited fat stores to use as fuel. Each time you ride, you use some of the limited carbohydrate stores, and if you ride at high-intensities for 1 1/2 hours, or more slowly, longer periods of time, you may start to feel dizzy, weak and you may “bonk,” and it will be impossible to keep riding at your current pace.

For optimal energy, sports nutritionists recommend eating 55-65% of calories from carbohydrates, 10-15% from protein and up to 30% of calories as fat. In addition to providing energy, this type of eating helps protect against heart disease, many cancers, hypertension, diabetes and obesity.

To figure out how many grams of carbohydrates you eat requires some high math. First, determine your daily calorie requirements. (A rule of thumb: women, use 14-23 calories per pound; men, 19-26 calories per pound. Use lower numbers if moderately active; higher, if very active.) Determine 55-65% of your total calories to equal your calories from carbohydrates. Divide calories from carbohydrates by 4 to calculate your grams of carbohydrate.

For example, I weigh 120 pounds and I'm very active so I need about 2,400 (120 x 20) calories a day. About 1,320-1,560 (55-65% of 2,400) calories from carbohydrates alone. This equals 330-390 (1,320-1,560/4) grams carbohydrate daily—Whew! Your brain just burned 25 grams of carbohydrate figuring that out. Another way to figure: 3-0.45 grams carbohydrate for each pound body weight. Either way you calculate, it's a lot of carbs, so try to get at least the minimum amount, and eat more if you're gearing up for a multi-day endurance ride.

For optimal endurance, here's how you should tailor your diet before, during and after your long haul.

The Week Before... You should try to stick to your plant-based diet as much as possible, but pay special attention to the details the week before an important endurance event. Contrary to popular belief, carbo-loading isn't a p.m. pasta party where you stuff your face and tell century war stories to “green” riders. It's week-long technique used to store more glycogen in the muscles by tapering exercise and eating primarily carbohydrates 3-4 days before the big event. (see guidelines below.)

Several studies of trained cyclists who followed a program similar to the one below has shown that they can ride farther, and often faster, than those who do not “top off” their glycogen stores. Studies have also shown that up to 50% of trained “unloaded” cyclists couldn't complete a 3-hour ride at 70% VO2max, where-as virtually all cyclists who carbo-loaded could.

A.M. BEFORE... Since everyone tolerates food before events differently, try to eat what you're comfortable with 2-4 hours before the start. Practice eating before training rides to get used to having something in your gut. Pre-exercise, high-carbohydrate meals—liquid, solids or sweets—have consistently proven to enhance performance.

During... To enhance endurance, try to get 30-60 grams carbohydrate per hour while riding, says Horswill. Tour de France and RAAM riders often eat 100 grams carbohydrate per hour. I'm always surprised by the number of cyclists, who rides, don't eat or drink enough early into a century, then they get weak, stop, pig-out on protein-filled sandwiches or roadside junk food, and wonder why they are reduced to not much more than road kill for the last 20 miles. For 30-60 grams per hour, you can drink at least 16 ounces of most sports drinks per hour and eat pieces of sports bars or packets of carbo gels or your favorite pocket fuels for additional energy.

After... Drink as much carbo-filled beverages to rehydrate and eat a meal that is carbo-rich and also has protein, too. Protein has been shown to help hasten recovery when it's taken with carbs post-exercise.

Thank you, thank you, thank you, Christy Guzzetta and Jody Sayler (yes) for organizing the Fourth of July Weekend at West Point. Everything went perfect. Well, almost perfect. But anything that wasn’t perfect at least has a great story to go with it. With 10% of the Club at West Point many of you have heard these stories before. You’ll have to live through them again here.

Even the weather tried to cooperate. Most people made it about halfway up to West Point Thursday before it started raining, and by the time the weekend ended on Sunday night, riding in the rain was all but forgotten. The best story of the ride up is how Clif Kranish and Rachel Spievack (yes) made it to West Point. After stopping to visit friends on the east side of the Hudson, Rachel decided she didn’t want to fight the traffic while climbing Anthony’s Nose (Route 1. leave hotel
2. go north
3. make all appropriate turns
4. go south
5. return to hotel
9) out of Peekskill. So what did they do? They took a taxi and asked to be dropped off at the top of the climb! So Rachel, where is it all those cars go after they reach the top? Do they just turn around and go back down the way they came?

Thursday afternoon’s rain lasted long into Thursday night, effectively canceling the Sunset Concert that evening (unless your child is in the Cadet Band). Unfortunately, it took hours of waiting before any decision on the concert was finalized. This, after Christy had staked out the best spot for all of us and waited in the rain for three hours. When it was time for Jody to lead us from the hotel to the picnic, it was still raining, with no let up in sight. Jody left for the picnic and concert anyway. When she looked back, she realized that fifteen to twenty people had followed her and that fifty people were still hurdles under the hotel awning trying to decide if it was worth the 20 minute walk for a prepaid picnic in the rain. Some went for the wet picnic, many opted for pizza in town. We’ve never seen that many people pass up a free meal. Does anybody want some leftover soggy chicken or pasta salad?

Friday’s ride featured an unplanned “hike in the woods” for Alan Resnick’s group as they made a wrong turn and wound up having to climb over and through a huge downed tree completely blocking the road. Now I wonder how anyone could have made a wrong turn with problems to get us on a boat Friday night for our dinner cruise. Our scheduled boat was taken over for a golf overhang so he chartered a couple of school buses (thankfully we didn’t have to do three to a seat, like in second grade) to get us to the substitute boat where everything went smoothly. And finally Christy did such a great job at “New Faces” at Saturday’s group dinner that we’re going to create a new Board position for him: Club M.C.!

On to other gossip: So, what was SIG graduate Nora Salazar doing at the upper west side’s Fairway early on a Sunday morning? She lives on the lower east side. Could it have something to do with fellow SIG graduate Wally Kulakowski who lives in the West 70’s? Could the SIG do more for you than just make you a better rider?

Last month’s Bulletin had a nice article by Jan Steffens about the C SIG and their hero, IRS Weisman. Susan Kreig, who designed the “IrV’s Angels” T shirt, also did the drawing in the Bulletin. But did anyone notice those bikes look like they have 12 or 13 cm stems instead of the 4 cm stems IrV recommended? Did IrV approve or did he make them return the shirts?

So who in the club is having the world’s biggest surprise party for her 30th birthday? The party will be so big they’re selling tickets, 75,000 of them. The party is in Atlanta on Sunday August 4th. (Yeah, it’s the Closing Ceremonies at the Olympics.) Stefani Jackenthal, who happened to be born on August 4, 1966, is working as the Media Director for the cycling events at the Atlanta Games. She was told “It’s a real party on Sunday”. She thinks it’s for her birthday. Don’t let the secret out.

The award for alliterative achievement for his witty ride write-up of July 14th, goes to the inimitable, incomparable, in-whatever Peter Hochstein. I can’t wait for Paul Rubenfarb’s retort.

It’s a dream of all of us to ride in the Tour de France, right. Well, we’ll all have to live vicariously through Elizabeth Emery. She was chosen as one of the members of an international composite team to race in the Tour de France Feminin. The twelve day race starts August 13 and ends in Paris after covering almost 1,000 miles. Good luck, EE.

Congratulations to Leonardo and Emma Paroli on the birth of their son in June. Little Luigi couldn’t wait to get out. He was really in a hurry. Maybe he had a ride to catch. Mom’s doing great and Luigi’s doing fine now. Congratulations to Amy Hanowitz and Steve Britt on the birth of their daughter, Julia Kathryn, on July 4th (coincidentally the exact same day as Steve’s birthday). We now know why they weren’t at West Point.

And, making an appearance at Kingsland Point was a beaming Rich and Susan Herbin with their son, Noah.

Also, congratulations to Amanda Schachter and Alex Levi on their recent wedding. The father of the bride, IrV Schachter, though, is our Road Bozo this month. It seems IrV had to get a Sunday morning ride in before the Sunday afternoon wedding ceremony. Not wanting to be late, for fear of being killed by his wife Hindy, IrV took off down Fifth Avenue trying to make it back in time to shower, shave and change. We’ve had all been happier if he slowed down for the taxis and trucks, and the bus that almost nailed him!

Thanks to some of this month’s sources, Nancy Neiditz, Judy Meyer, Mark Martinez, Rich Borow, Steve Britt and Christy Guzzetta. Keep that gossip coming.
An Update on Women's Comfort in the Saddle!

by Andrea Goodman (with the help of Happy Freedman)

The following comment in the July bulletin pushed several alarm bells: "women who have crotch problems should get a shorter stem!" While the person quoted has been known to spark a bit of controversy in the past, I'm afraid the negative implications of this opinion can be extremely damaging. I offer here to set the record straight from a woman's point of view, and not necessarily those of a "high performance athlete"- although who knows better about dealing with long hours in the saddle than a high performance athlete!

Crotch comfort depends on three things:
1) Proper bike fit, in this case making sure the top tube length is correct. In some cases, this can’t be corrected with a shorter stem, especially if the top tube is too short in the first place. Sometimes a longer stem is the cure! You might try rolling the handlebars up a bit so that you are not reaching for the brake levers. The bike manuals are not accurate for everyone when they say the drops should be parallel to the ground. STI levers can extend your reach beyond comfort also. If this is a problem, shorter reach levers are now available. As for seats, a seat post which is too high or a saddle which isn’t level can cause big problems. Over-paddling a saddle doesn’t help either. As always, see your local bike shop or call one of the local coaches for a proper fit.
2) Flat back, flat back, flat back! Proper riding position depends on a flat back supported by good abdominal muscles and flexibility in the ham strings. There should be no hump in the back from hunching, nor a curve inward from over-arching. An arch in the back is an invitation to bruises.
3) Now for the bad news! Perhaps the best way to insure crotch comfort is to wear expensive bike shorts. More padding doesn’t make shorts better, a high absorption insert does. The cheap mail order shorts are fine for a spin in the park, but for long rides, an eight-paneled short with Ultra-sensor fabric will not only allow you to ride pain free, but if you are already chafed from a previous ride, these shorts will actually make you feel better! Leather chamois shorts are fine too, if you can find them. I recommend the Ultrasensor shorts because of their superb fit against the body. They should fit like a girdle but not cut off your air supply. You want the shorts tight because more padding and more fabric equal more chafing. This is true when you use the bike at the gym as well. Buy the same size short as your normal pants size, or maybe one size down. The drawback is the cost at $80 a shot, but if you shop around you can find them at less than 1/2 price (try Sierra Trading Post, a discount catalogue which you probably get if you are on the bike catalogue lists*). Trimming off two pairs of these shorts will get you through any cycling trip with repeated days in the saddle, perhaps the most dreaded fear from anyone already suffering from soreness.

Happy trails, and let me know what ya’ think once you've tried 'em!

Bike Watch
by Richard Rosenthal

News from the Dept. of Bike Justice: we previously noted here the televising of a videotape made by perps as they bashed cyclists with a bat and shot at them as they drove by them, laughing all the while. Update: they’ll be out in four years. We previously noted here the Daily News setting up a bike to be stolen, then photographing the inevitable theft. Update: bike thief will be out in one-and-a-half. • NYCCer Mark Martinez had letter to the sports editor in The New York Times sports section (7/1). The part of it that ran praised Sam Abt's Times coverage of the Tour de France and urged the Times to give greater attention to cycling. Mark wrote: "It's time to wake up and smell the espresso." He also chided the Times for its mis-captioning of a picture of Frederic Mancassin, calling him Mario Cipollini. Predictably, the Times didn't print this part of the letter. • Comes a new form of anti-theft bike protection. Mary Pike reports seeing a bike in Central Park without a lock yet without anyone making a move to steal it. The owner had his pit bull leashed to it. • Comes a new form of hazardous bike rider. We've all seen the one riding with headphones on, grooving to the Top 40, and hearing not much of anything else around him. Now comes a sighting of a rider speaking on cellular phone. • The rasta cyclist in the WKTU bike stop poster is grooving to the sounds of that radio station. Great. Let's sell cyclists on the idea of wearing headphones. And, in his case, no helmet. • Modern day VeloNews co-founder and NYCCer-in-exile-in-Colorado wrote to take exception to what he thought was this column's slighting of inside Triathlon when it was reported here that one reads I.T. and Triathlete without seeing an African-American. David enclosed a single, more than year old article about one. His note said he was concerned with substance, not form. In writing what I did, my point wasn't to accuse the magazines of oversight or omission. It was merely to comment on the paucity of blacks in the sport, an observation, as it happens, also made in the article David sent by the African-American who was the subject of the article. • VeloNews's online coverage of the Tour de France contained a f Illup supposedly written contemporaneous with each day's stage by Geoff Brown, a Motorola team mechanic. It obviously wasn't. Brown told us on Stage 9 how many spokes Lance Armstrong was likely to have on his wheels for that day's stage. The thing of it was that Armstrong dropped out on Stage 6. (Don't write again, David: I really do think your publications are terrific.) • Twice recently, three weeks apart, in its coverage of what is underatedly referred to as "The Troubles" in northern Ireland, John Darnton, in The New York Times, has likened the peace process to riding a bicycle: you can't go back wards or lean too far to the left or right without falling off. • How appropriate that Steve Tesch's obituary in the Times (7/2) was written by Bruce Weber. Tesch wrote "Breaking Away" and "American Flyer," movies about cycling. Weber's series of articles on his cycling across the country was carried in the Times and he was a guest speaker at a NYCC meeting. • By the time you read this, sprinter Michael Johnson will have won at least one Olympic medal. In late June the Times likened his running style to that of a cyclist. • By act of Congress (Public Law 95-606: Nov. 8, 1978, Sec. 110), the Olympic name may not be used commercially unless sanctioned by the U.S. Olympic Committee. The law is transgressed by Litespeed and Continental in their ads in the current (7/15) VeloNews. • Incidentally, the preamble to the law states its intent is "to promote and coordinate amateur athletic activity in the United States" and, in fact, is referred to in the legislation as the "Amateur Sports Act of 1978." Since the Olympics now admits professional athletes in cycling and just about every other sport where there are professionals, shouldn't that violate, if not altogether undo the act? • With the advent of the Olympics, a spate of ads and commercials features cyclists. Perhaps you, like I, wonder why the non-profit U.S. Post Office spends its money (1) sponsoring a team, and (2) running commercials, even one with the great Rebecca Twigg, who, it doesn't just so happen, happens to be the USPO's women's (sic) team. The post office's competitor, UPS, shows an unnamed cyclist, supposedly one of its employees, training for the Olympics. • Former NYCCer Elizabeth Emery was pictured and named in a full page ad by Chevrolet saluting its team. Volkswagen ran a full page ad in USA Today saluting Don Myrah (from team Trek-Volkswagen) for making the Olympics. Marie Claire ran three pictures of Phyllis Hines in the belief she was Olympics-bound. USA Today had an absolutely compelling, front page article on the emotional, familial, and financial hardships suffered by Tinker Juarez (7/18). And Time magazine ran a piece on Julie Furtado. If you don't know these names you are to be congratulated. That means your life is too rich, too interesting, and too filled for you to follow racing. • The supremely elegant, even though helmet-wearing, Mr. Jenkins, the Tanqueray gin man seen on bus stop billboards around town, is back this year to once again tout the AIDS bike ride. • NYCCer Simone Smith just finished reading "Go to the Sun," a novel by Jane McManus (Harper Collins, 1996) about a woman who rides a bike from Chicago to Alaska in pursuit of a memory. • Tiger Woods, when asked by Jay Leno (6/25) what he did when he wasn't playing golf or attending school, said he rode his bike. That seems reasonable: Greg LeMond used to unwind from cycling by playing golf.

Minutes
New York Cycle Club Board Meeting, Tuesday June 4, 1996
ABSENT: Stephanie Blecher, Dona Kahn and Geo Kaplan.

Minutes of the meeting of May 21, 1996 were approved. Reyna presented the fiscal report.

Caryl advised that the July program would be about cycling in Vietnam. She also reported that she was having difficulty finding a place for the holiday party for $30 or less a person. Steve welcomed Peter Morales who had agreed to serve as B-rider coordinator. Mitch indicated that we needed creativity in rides. He said it was important that new members understand the nature of all-class rides. He also suggested it was desirable for all riders on such rides to arrive at the same time and place.

The board next discussed an additional all-class ride, and Gene suggested that we provide a free lunch on the additional ride. Reyna felt four all-class rides might be too many, but Peter felt they attracted new members. It was suggested that perhaps the additional all-class ride could be tied to a special event like a barbecue or miniature golf. It was agreed that lunch would only be provided to paid members. The next board meeting was scheduled for 6 P.M. on Tuesday July 9, before the membership meeting.

Rich discussed the planned closing of the GWB south sidewalk. Mitch reported that the membership of 829 was 120 more than last year at this time. Rich reported a successful new-comers ride. He also discussed ways to promote the century.

Doug reported the difficulty of getting everything together for the Bulletin. Next there was a discussion of getting more rides. Gene suggested that some form of recognition for ride leadership might help.

Steve asked about the proposal to sponsor a racing team, although Conrad suggested that Jeff Vogel had dropped the idea.

It was the sense of the meeting that there was no objection to such sponsorship if there was no cost to the club.

The meeting adjourned at 9:05 P.M.

TUESDAY JUNE 11, 1996
PRESENT: Gene Vezzani, Steve Britt, Caryl Baron, C.J. Obregon, Rich Borow, Mitch Yarnin, and Geo Kaplan

Caryl reported that she had found a deal that would deliver meals to Kingsland State Park. The board authorized her to make the arrangements. Gene advised the members that Stephanie Blecher had resigned, and that he was canvassing for a replacement. Dates for the all-class rides in July and August were discussed.

There was a brief discussion of steps that might be taken to prevent people from regularly using our ride listings without joining the club.

Caryl felt a problem was also developing in that new members were not being sent the Bulletin in a timely manner. The meeting adjourned at 9:45 P.M.

Respectfully submitted

Conrad J. Obregon
Before your first club ride, please read this:

NYCC RIDES are led by volunteer leaders who plan the route and maintain the listed speed (e.g. B15 = B Style / 15 mph cruising speed - see charts). Our rides are described by pace and style because it's more fun when the group is of similar ability. We ride for fun, fitness, and food.

RIDE STYLE indicates the type of riding. See chart at right. CRUISING SPEED indicates the ride's speed on flat terrain. AVERAGE RIDING SPEED over rolling terrain is 3 mph less than cruising speed. This will vary plus or minus 1 mph according to terrain. OVERALL SPEED, including all rest and food stops, is about 3 mph less than average riding speed.

SELF-TEST: Assess your personal cruising speed by riding 4 laps (2.48 miles) around Central Park at a comfortable pace and matching your time with the chart. NOTE: Riding fewer than 4 laps will give you a false assessment. (The northern end of the park can be dangerous; ride with other cyclists.)

YOUR FIRST NYCC RIDE: Be conservative. Choose a ride easier and shorter than you think you can actually handle. You won’t enjoy struggling to keep up with a ride that’s too fast for you, nor will the group enjoy waiting for you. It’s a good idea to call the leader a day or so before the ride, and introduce yourself when signing up at the start.

BEFORE ANY RIDE: Check that your bike is in good riding condition: brakes and derailleurs working well, tires pumped to the pressure specified on the sidewall. Eat breakfast.

BRING: spare tube, tire levers, patch kit, pump, water, snacks, money, medical ID, emergency phone numbers. We also suggest: lock, rail pass. Leaders may specify other items in their ride listings.

BIKE TRAINS: See schedule below. Saturdays and Sundays from April 16 through October 31. MetroNorth has scheduled specific trains to/from Grand Central Station to accommodate large groups of cyclists.

Bike passes are always required. There are no Bike Trains on holiday weekends. Refer to roster for restrictions which apply at other times. If you are leading a ride and absolutely require a Bike Train at another time, you must call NYCC’s MetroNorth liaison, Jeff Vogel at (718) 607-6978 well in advance to try to arrange another train for your ride.
